Immunization and the Humanities

This Café Scientifique aims to consider the public life of the humanities by bringing critical questions to bear on vaccine hesitancy. Chaired by Natasha Crowcroft, Chief of Applied Immunization Research and Evaluation at Public Health Ontario, this respectful discussion will take place at the Centre for Social Innovation - Annex
Friday April 27th 4:30-6:00pm

Tickets are free and available at: Eventbrite.com (search for Café Scientifique Immunization and the Humanities)
Location: 720 Bathurst Street

Topics and Speakers

- Vaccinating in the age of apathy
  - Heather MacDougall, PhD

- Vaccine Hesitancy and Influenza
  - Sarah Buchan

- Migrant health and vaccine hesitancy
  - Abdool Yasseen

- Argumentative theory of reasoning
  - Sean Hingston

- Empathy and disbelief
  - Katherine Shwetz

Jackman Humanities Institute
UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO